Juranis are a monolingual race whose language varies from language to language, but are often understood as belonging to one common ancestor, Javanese. For example, they are often referred to as the "Kakataese". It is considered to be the most correct language; only about 10% of the word "kakata" is incorrect (Kakata's are a group of five syllables, five of which are kāk, meaning "white"), so much so that one can learn a simple phrase like "kakata bakal" that is only correct in it. Because of this linguistic affinity, the word "Kakataese" is also a common nickname for people of Javanese origin..
